A little dry on the topic because let's face it it's a company officer book and its 100% politically correctness but it's an easy read and the chapters are not super long.8 of 8 people found the following review helpful. PURE BABBLE and Conjecture second editionBy A. DavisThis book is pure babble and conjecture. Chapters start off focused and end up taking you in circles while trying to explain information that has NOTHING to do with an Company Officers Job! Who let this guy publish anything? They whole book could be condensed into 50 pages, instead the author fills pages with babble and conjecture. Dont waste your money. An ifsta book would be much better than this garbage! Im pissed they made me select a single star that it doesnt deserve!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Book ReviewBy swilson1237It's a textbook. What more can I say? It is filled with information that you need for a class and it is something that you need.

This book was developed to assist paid and volunteer firefighters in the quest to become fire officers. Based on NFPA 1021, Standard for Fire Officer Professional Competency, 2003 Edition, this updated book features vital information for those who seek certification as Fire Officer I or II. Comprehensive coverage not only satisfies the operational requirements of NFPA 1021 levels I and II, but also addresses the all-important 'soft skills' that are essential to quick mastery of the fire officer position. Human resource management, communication, leadership, community and government relations, administration and management, fire prevention, inspections and investigations, and safety issues are all addressed for proficiency on the job. In this regard, the book is also useful for members of rescue squads, emergency medical response agencies, and other similar emergency organizations.

"Delmar has done a great job in covering all the basics that a Company Officer needs to start building a solid base in becoming an effective leader in the fire service." - Pete Evers, Auburn Fire Department, Auburn, CA
