Alternative readings By Ceacute; sar Gonzaacute;lez Rouco This book was much of a disappointment. I'd rather read the following books on war instead of Neiberg's work: a) "War in human civilization" by Azar Gat; b) "War before Civilization. The Myth of the Peaceful Savage", by Lawrence Keeley; c) "How War Began" by Keith F. Otterbein; d) "War and Peace and War: The Rise and Fall of Empires" by Peter Turchin; and e) "War and the Law of Nations: A General History" by Stephen Neff. 1 of 8 people found the following review helpful. Everybody riding on a "World History" frenzy? By Teddy Sim YHI agree with the view of Cesar Gonzalez. I'm left to wonder if everyone is keen to get on the "world history" bandwagon such that whatever is written before is just tagged with something associating with "world history" and re-hashed to appear as another book on the market?

Despite the catastrophic effects of war, wars have also proved to be instrumental to long-term change in world history. This text is the first of its kind to survey how warfare has developed from ancient times to the present day and the role it has played in shaping the world we know. The periods discussed include: * the pre-gunpowder era* the development of gunpowder weapons and their rapid adoption in Western Europe* the French Revolution and the industrialization of warfare* the First and Second World Wars* the Cold War and the wars of liberation fought across the Third World. With in-depth examples illustrating the dominant themes in the history of warfare, Warfare in World History focuses not only on the famous and heroic, but also discusses the experiences of countless millions of unknowns who have fought in wars over time.

"Neiberg has provided [a] useful supplemental [text]...."Warfare in World History covers general military trends and technologies that have largely disappeared from survey texts." - "Military History About the Author" Michael S. Neiberg is Associate Professor of History at the United States Air Force Academy. He is the author of Making Soldier-Citizens.
